I believe Hiroshi Shibata can answer this, he is busy integrating gems and doing a lot of work on the .gemspec files + bundler integration by now, I think. :)

I assume that the ruby github page is a secondary mirror site; the primary one is ruby-lang.org and the ruby svn repository. But I may be wrong so feel free to ignore what I wrote there.

I don't understand, what's wrong with homepage being ruby-lang.org?

It seems better to link to the place where the development of these libraries happen.
