I don't see anything that indicates this should be a backport.

Can you give us more information (code/commands used) on how to reproduce this issue?

Hi Slava,

This looks like it might be a Nokogiri bug. I've fixed a few segfaults in Nokogiri lately, and I would like to fix this one too. You can see my Nokogiri pull requests here -- <https://github.com/tenderlove/nokogiri/pulls> .

However, I don't know how to reproduce your issue. It looks like you are running a Rails project to trigger the bug.

Can you zip up the project and email it to me? If it is not an opensource project and you have concerns about sending it, can you reproduce the bug in a new project with just a few files copied over?

Cheers,
Tim

It seems 3rd party issue.
