

Ruby trunk - Feature #6823

Where/how should ruby-mode issues be reported?

Description
Hi!
I've previously reported a couple of issues with ruby-mode, namely
http://bugs.ruby-lang.org/issues/5356
and
http://bugs.ruby-lang.org/issues/5357
They've seen no progress.
Just to be clear, am I reporting these issues to the correct bug tracker?
There are quite a few ruby-mode bugs that are going stale:
http://bugs.ruby-lang.org/issues/5140
http://bugs.ruby-lang.org/issues/5382
http://bugs.ruby-lang.org/issues/5453
http://bugs.ruby-lang.org/issues/5670 (dup of 5382, but is more explicit, so should replace 5382)
http://bugs.ruby-lang.org/issues/6090
And some new ones:
http://bugs.ruby-lang.org/issues/6742
A comment from Shyouhei on
http://bugs.ruby-lang.org/issues/5453
states that one should report this to the Emacs developers. Is this correct? If so, all these issues should be reported there and closed. Also, ruby-mode.el should then be removed from the Ruby repository to avoid any confusion (well, it should really be removed either way).

- Target version changed from 2.0.0 to 2.6

Currently, I hesitate to drop ruby-mode.el from 2.0.0.
I'm setting to next minor tentatively. But I'm open to any opinion (before code freeze).

Anyone knows a similar case where some parts are transferred to other projects (such as Emacs)?

#3 - 11/29/2012 05:50 PM - nobu (Nobuyoshi Nakada)

vote to remove ruby-mode.el.

#4 - 07/09/2013 01:10 AM - dgutov (Dmitry Gutov)

I vote to remove it as well.

Is there anything we can or should do in the Emacs trunk to speed it up?

#5 - 07/09/2013 04:07 PM - bozhidar (Bozhidar Batsov)

I also support the removal of ruby-mode.el. Its presence in the Ruby codebase creates a lot of confusion for Emacs users.

#6 - 11/30/2017 10:28 AM - hsbt (Hiroshi SHIBATA)

I can create a repository on GitHub. ex. "<https://github.com/ruby/elisp>"

We will discuss this issue at next developer meeting at Dec, 12th.
